HUMAN TRAFFICKING

OVERVIEW

Human trafficking is a crime involving the exploitation of someone for the purposes of compelled labor or a commercial sex act through the use of force, fraud, or coercion. Human trafficking affects individuals across the world, including here in the United States, and is commonly regarded as one of the most pressing human rights issues of our time. Human trafficking affects every community in the United States across age, gender, ethnicity, and socio-economic backgrounds.

As defined under North Dakota and U.S. law, victims of human trafficking can be divided into three populations:

- Children under age 18 induced into commercial sex.
- Adults aged 18 or over induced into commercial sex through force, fraud, or coercion.
- Children and adults induced to perform labor or services through force, fraud, or coercion.

FORMS OF TRAFFICKING

Sex trafficking is the recruitment, harboring, transportation, provision, obtaining, patronizing, or soliciting of a person for the purposes of a commercial sex act, in which the commercial sex act is induced by force, fraud, or coercion, or in which the person induced to perform such an act has not attained 18 years of age (22 USC § 7102).

Labor trafficking is the recruitment, harboring, transportation, provision, or obtaining of a person for labor or services, through the use of force, fraud, or coercion for the purposes of subjection to involuntary servitude, peonage, debt bondage, or slavery (22 USC § 7102).

EXPLOITATION VS. TRAFFICKING

Exploitation can be either commercial sexual exploitation or labor exploitation.

Commercial sexual exploitation, also known as sex trafficking, is the crime of using force, fraud or coercion to induce another individual to sell sex. Both youths and adults can be victims of commercial sexual exploitation. By law, minors do not have the legal capacity for consent to sexual acts. Therefore, one is not required to prove force, fraud or coercion in commercial sexual exploitation/sex trafficking involving minor victims.

Anybody who exchanges a sex act for money, shelter, drugs, or anything of value, with a minor is a sex trafficker. This includes survival sex, stripping, sextortion, pornography, and numerous fields of work.

Labor exploitation occurs when employers deny workers their rights under labor law; it is a violation of the labor law code by the employer, for example, wage theft, unauthorized payroll deductions, employer retaliation, employment discrimination, etc., without the use of force, fraud or coercion against the employee.

- A youth runs away from home or is kicked out of their home, and someone offers them a “safe” place to stay in exchange for a sexual act. That is survival sex. The individual who offers such “safe” place to stay in exchange for a sexual act with a minor is a sex trafficker. There is no requirement to prove force, fraud or coercion of sex trafficking involving minor victims.
- An individual works for a business in exchange for shelter, which may be shared with other individuals. The individual must have endured either, force, fraud or coercion to work for that business in order to be determined as a labor trafficking victim. Although victims may suffer all the three elements, only one of these elements needs to be present, not all three, for the case of labor trafficking to be determined. If the individual has the option to quit or change the job, this is labor exploitation.

EXPLOITATION VS. TRAFFICKING

Trafficking is exploitation involving force, fraud or coercion, or is facilitating the exploitation of a minor victim. Trafficking can either be sex or labor trafficking, and in some cases, victims may experience both sex and labor trafficking. A party acts as a trafficker, using force, fraud or coercion to procure sex or labor acts for themselves, or a purchaser. The party profiting from the act is the trafficker.

- Parents cannot afford rent and the landlord agrees to waive rent in exchange for a sexual act from the child. Those parents are now sex traffickers.
- A boyfriend/girlfriend coerces a significant other to have sex with their friends in exchange for money, drugs, a new cell phone, clothing, etc. That boy/girlfriend is their trafficker.

One must look for force, fraud, or coercion when examining any incident to determine whether it could be considered labor trafficking. Only one of these elements needs to be present, not all three, for a case to be determined as labor trafficking, for both youths and adults.

- An employer forces an employee to work long hours for little/no pay, withholds payment, falsely claims that the employee owes money to the employer, and physically abuses and threatens the life of the employee, telling them that if they leave or report the exploitation, their family will be harmed. This is a form of labor trafficking. In this case there are all elements of labor trafficking – force, fraud and coercion.
- When looking for force, fraud, or coercion, one must look at it from the victim's perspective, or state of mind. The degree of force needed to make one person do something they don't want to do may be far greater, or far less, for any given individual.
- Physically assaulting or threatening to assault a victim in order to force them to perform an act of labor is an example labor trafficking through use of force. A trafficker need not actually assault the victim; simply threatening to assault the victim can constitute force or coercion. Also violence threatened against another, e.g., a victim's family can be considered force or coercion.
- If an employer offers a job they know does not, in fact, exist, or if they lie about the working conditions and salary of a job, they are using fraud to obtain the victim's labor or services.
- A foreign labor contractor offers a woman a job working as a domestic servant in the U.S.A and offers to pay the transportation costs, which the woman will repay through her earnings. The contractor promises the woman a certain salary and work conditions. However, when the woman arrives she finds she is forced to work more hours or for less pay than originally promised. If the woman cannot change the job or quit without consequences, this is fraud and force at play, and the foreign labor contractor is the labor trafficker.

TRAFFICKING IN NORTH DAKOTA

HISTORY

In response to the presence of human trafficking in North Dakota, a Human Trafficking Commission was created by the 64th Legislative Assembly and established within the Office of Attorney General. N.D.C.C. § 54-12-33. The Commission was originally charged with developing a coordinated and comprehensive plan to provide victims with services; collecting and evaluating data on human trafficking in this state and promoting public awareness about human trafficking, victim remedies and services, and trafficking prevention. During the 65th ND Legislative Assembly, the authority and duties of the Commission were narrowed in order to focus on the collection and evaluation of data, and to promote public awareness on human trafficking and victim services. The Attorney General's office partners with the federal North Dakota Human Trafficking Task Force on these efforts.

HUMAN TRAFFICKING: VICTIM TREATMENT AND SUPPORT SERVICES FUNDING

The 66th Legislative Assembly approved an appropriation of $1.1 million to organizations involved in providing prevention and treatment services to human trafficking victims. The appropriated funds were awarded through an open, competitive process to organizations that demonstrated involvement in providing prevention and treatment services related to human trafficking victims, in coordination with state and local governments.

The grant award period commenced on July 1, 2019 and continued through June 30, 2021. A new award period started July 1, 2021 and ends June 2023. Additional information on the grantees can be found on the Criminal Justice Resources page of the Attorney General's website.

NORTH DAKOTA HUMAN TRAFFICKING TASK FORCE

Since 2015, the Attorney General and the Human Trafficking Commission have been working closely with the North Dakota Human Trafficking Task Force (NDHTTF) to build a coordinated response to human trafficking in the state. The NDHTTF was founded in late 2015 through the North Dakota Office of Attorney General (NDOAG), CAWS North Dakota (CAWS ND), and the U.S. Attorney's Office in North Dakota (USAO).

OVERVIEW OF NDHTTF

The North Dakota Human Trafficking Task Force is a collaborative team made up of law enforcement, prosecution, and service providers at federal, state, and local levels. The NDHTTF responds to victims of sex and labor trafficking, providing comprehensive services, investigating traffickers and solicitors, and prosecuting offenders. The NDHTTF is the nexus for a network of law enforcement and service providers to work in tandem to build capacity and combat human trafficking statewide.

The NDHTTF does this through the following methods: Training communities to identify exploitation and trafficking and providing points of contact upon identification, training local multidisciplinary teams to respond to victims and investigate trafficking-related crime, assisting response agencies and communities with development of response protocol, providing technical assistance to local response teams upon request, running operations and investigating trafficking related crimes, prosecuting offenders and providing victims with restitution, engaging in national anti-trafficking best practices and sharing of resources, and building networks for victims to access services and resources.

The North Dakota Human Trafficking Task Force is a statewide, multidisciplinary collaboration of law enforcement, service providers, and prosecution, established to work in a victim-centered manner to prevent, detect, disrupt, and dismantle human trafficking through coordinated, comprehensive services and efficient investigation and prosecution.

The core of the NDHTTF model involves three components: 1) Multi-disciplinary teams (MDTs) across the state (operating in 9 communities) that provide immediate response to trafficked individuals; 2) A task force Director, Grant Tech, and Operational Team coordinating the activities of the task force and providing training and technical assistance to the local MDTs; and 3) Subcommittees that help drive progress in developing best practices, solving common problems, and facilitating cooperation across the state.

The NDHTTF also developed a Human Trafficking Fund that is accessible to agencies across the state to support victims of sex and labor trafficking. Funding is accessed by completing a request form outlining the type of trafficking, basic demographic information, and a brief description of the client's need related to trafficking. This funding provides services to victims throughout their recovery process, from the moment someone is recovered through their steps toward self-sufficiency. These services fall into one of the following categories:

Immediate Response/Relief

basic needs items, emergency food assistance, medical care, emergency shelter

Recovery

therapeutic/mental health services, transitional housing, legal services

Resilience

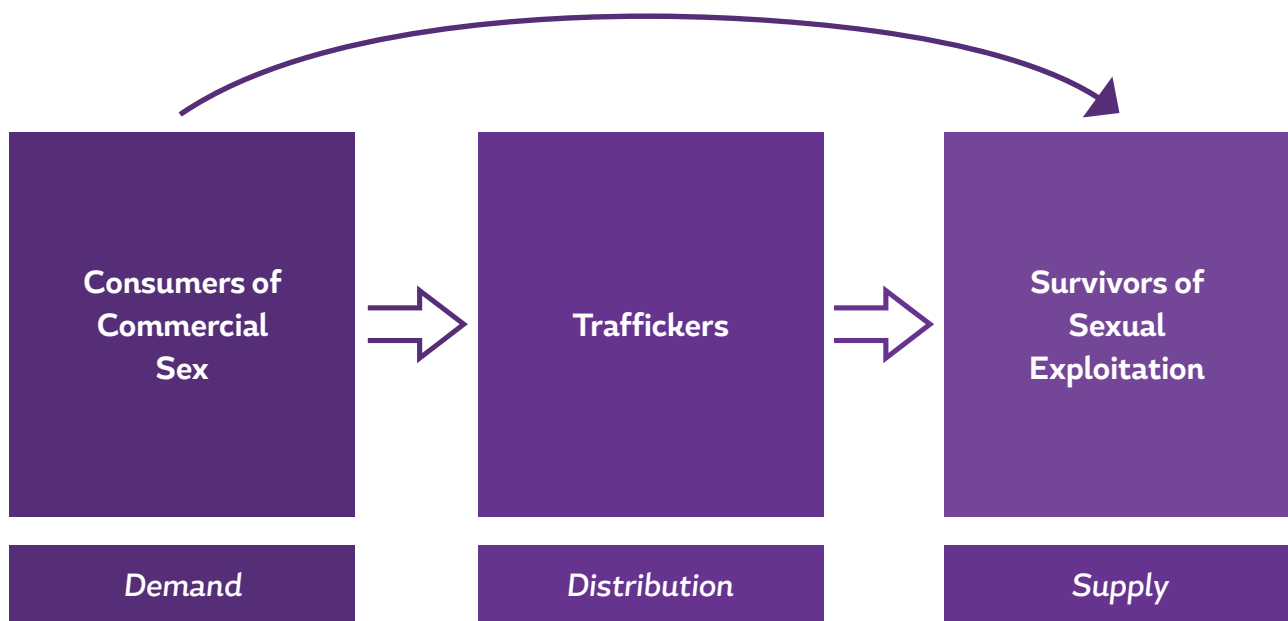

education, job training, life-skill building (finances, self-care, etc.)

DEMAND REDUCTION PROGRAM

Demand Reduction Programs (DRPs), sometimes referred to as “John Schools”, are targeted at reducing recidivism rates for participants. These programs target the buyers of sex instead of targeting the seller. DRPs educate participants on the impact of prostitution and sex trafficking on communities, survivors, spouses, and children.

“ I hope this education can continue to be a mainstream program in our community. ”

- Demand Reduction Program Participant

One of the major concerns with combating the impact of human trafficking in our state is the demand for hiring another individual with the intention of engaging in sexual activity. The Human Trafficking Commission’s Demand Reduction Committee worked with partner organizations to create a comprehensive intermediate sentencing, diversion, and education option for offenders charged with or convicted of solicitation. The program was rolled out in July of 2017 and is now run by 31:8 Project in partnership with the University of Mary and the Attorney General’s Office. While some work is being conducted with survivors, this program is the only program in the state that focuses on reducing the demand for prostitution. The underlying idea is that many of the individuals who are purchasing prostitution do not know the full impact of their behavior.

The Demand Reduction Program is a sentencing option that can be court ordered and exposes these individuals to the continued risks and impacts of their behavior plus provides them with some tools and contacts to help improve the health of some of the relationships in their lives that may be influencing their decisions to purchase other individuals and therefore increase the risk of human trafficking in the state. This program also helps other educational organizations gain a greater understanding as to the role that the Demand Reduction Program plays in reducing the recidivism of participants through a sentence and diversion aspect that involves an education program. This understanding may lead to changes in the sentencing and correctional systems in ways that generate a broader sense of justice and healing rather than punishment. The Demand Reduction Program also has the potential to improve the health of relationships and communities in our region by educating offenders about the impacts of their action on themselves and others. This program also incorporates input from survivors of human trafficking.

Since the inception of the program, thirty offenders have completed the program. Attendees ranged in age from 20-67 years old. To increase awareness about the program amongst judges, attorneys, and law enforcement officers, the Demand Reduction Program Coordinator conducts outreach and education to individuals around the state, reaching over 1,000 people in 2022.

There are more people affected by trafficking and exploitation in North Dakota than current data reflects. The NDHTTF currently compiles comprehensive data around human trafficking in the state. Victims served by agencies outside of the NDHTTF may not be reflected in current data.

LOOKING FORWARD

In 2020, the NDHTTF conducted a survey of partner organizations and identified ten goals the task force will work towards over the next three years to advance anti-trafficking efforts. These goals are outlined below:

Goal 1: Use funding and training to increase shelter staff's capacity for providing trauma-informed care to trafficking victims.

Goal 2: Design and implement a proactive public awareness plan to increase North Dakotans' understanding of both sex and labor trafficking.

Goal 3: Develop and nurture engagement by trafficking survivors in the work of the NDHTTF.

Goal 4: Improve response to labor trafficking with increased legal services, stronger case management, and improved understanding of legal options.

Goal 5: Provide support to strengthen navigators' roles as highly valued partners in local responses to human trafficking.

Goal 6: Enhance relationships among law enforcement, prosecution, and victim service providers so that Task Force members work together effectively on human trafficking investigations.

Goal 7: Collaborate and consult with Tribal Nations and communities in North Dakota to provide culturally responsive services to Native victims of human trafficking.

Goal 8: Use funding and training to increase trafficking survivors' options for aftercare for long-term independence and healing.

Goal 9: Facilitate training and collaboration to strengthen prosecutions of human trafficking cases.

Goal 10: Establish consolidation of specialized federal, state, and local law enforcement personnel and victim service specialists at a single site to enhance information sharing and cross-occupational team building and cooperation.

Survivor Voices

In 2021, the NDHTTF worked with a group of trafficking survivors to participate in a questionnaire. We asked questions about what they would like us to understand about their experience and how communities can support trafficking survivors. These are voices from survivors in our communities around the state.

“ There's power in numbers. If we as a society get the "it takes a village" mentality back we can move mountains. Slow down, see people! See the people that are hurting, that are taking paths that out of the normal. Be the last beacon of hope that they may have. See them as your very own loved one. Refrain for looking down on survivors/victims, placing blame or questioning the "whys" of why they would do it, or why wouldn't they say anything. Most times we are harder on ourselves then anyone could everrrrr everrrrr be!

“ That the market for HT is literally in their hands everyday (phones). I would especially want parents to know to check their children's phones on a regular basis and that it isn't because they don't trust them, it is that they don't trust other people. Also, I would want it to be known that we are all human and have or will continue to watch pornography but they need to know that they could be contributing to someone's rape or trauma as they do not know if this person is consenting or not. That if someone purchases sex it is not just a business transaction, the person on the other end is just putting up a front.

“ Getting out of prison and moving back to the place where your crime was committed, I was particularly tough. I will say I wasn't comfortable a lot of the time. I held onto my faith and a few people reached out to me and that's what got me through. Most people don't even realize the sex crimes that go on in this area. I've been trafficked in rural western North Dakota in particular. Yet no one talks about it no one wants to talk about it and it's embarrassing. I find myself in a situation where sometimes I'll be working and a guy will come in that has called me on Backpage. I get so embarrassed and run to the back room, I can't even talk to anyone about it because it's so taboo in this area and I'm ashamed.

“ The people who are doing the trafficking literally get a slap on the wrist. If policies aren't in place to make a trafficker not want to do it then they will continue. Most of the time the victim gets harsher punishment than the trafficker. They can be less judgmental and understand that everyone has a story and not all stories are picture perfect. Give a victim a chance to make a better life for themselves.

“ There was a time we were staying at this hotel; the housekeepers knew what I was doing there. We had been there a week or so and one morning as I was getting cleaning supplies to tidy up the room. These two-house keepers pulled me aside and told me they knew. And that if I needed help they would help me. I will always remember those two. They saw me that day.

CONCLUSION

The Attorney General's Office and the North Dakota Human Trafficking Task Force continue to work together to shed light on the state of human trafficking in North Dakota. Turning the tide on exploitation and trafficking will take the continued attention and commitment of our elected leaders, law enforcement and non-profit partners. The Attorney General's Office urges elected officials, non-profit leaders, federal partners and all law enforcement jurisdictions to remain steadfast in their commitment to working collaboratively to end human trafficking in North Dakota.
